The Problem A sentence exhibits parallelism if similar ideas are expressed using the same syntactic and grammatical structure. Writers use parallel structures to communicate ideas that have the same importance using the same grammatical structure. Parallelism is most common using gerund phrases (verb + ing) or infinitives (to + verb). Faulty parallelism occurs when writers do not use a parallel structure to communicate a series of ideas. Faulty Parallelism. Without good pitching, the Marlins can be expected to lose more than eighty games, to draft early in next year's draft, and attendance will suffer greatly. What are the ideas that seem to have the same importance? The Marlins will lose more than eighty games. The Marlins will draft early in next year's draft. The Marlins' attendance will suffer greatly. Note that we have two infinitive phrases and one independent clause. A revision using parallel structure can be worded as follows: Correct Parallelism: Without good pitching, the Marlins can be expected to lose more than eighty games, to draft early in next year's draft, and to suffer greatly in attendance. The term parallelism also applies to using correlative conjunctions and comparisons properly. Correlative Conjunctions Take a look at the following list of correlative conjunctions. both; and; not; but; not only; but also; either; or; whether; or; neither; nor. These conjunctions connect words, phrases, and clauses that have the same level of meaning in the same sentence. Use the same grammatical structure with both elements of the correlative. Faulty Parallelism: Andrew was both an industrious student, and he was also an excellent athlete. Correct Parallelism: Andrew was both an industrious student and an excellent athlete. Notice that since an (adjective + noun) pair is used with both elements, no comma is needed. If you use not only ... but also with independent clauses, you must separate the clauses with a comma, and you sometimes place the subject pronoun between the word but and the word also. Example: Jessica not only excelled in mathematics, but she also astounded audiences with her musical talent. Comparisons Use a parallel structure when you connect two words, phrases, or clauses with a comparison word, including than or as. Faulty Parallelism: Sharon's grade point average is much higher than her brother. Correct Parallelism: Sharon's grade point average is much higher than her brother's (grade point average). Correct Parallelism: Sharon has a higher grade point average than her brother (does). A good parallel structure can add a certain elan to a sentence that has equivalent or evenly-balanced parts. For a more detailed explanation and exercises, download the free worksheets. They are in PDF format. The front page explains parallelism and explains how to correct errors in parallelism. The second page consists of sentences that the student must correct. There is space provided below each sentence, so that the student actually has to write out the sentence, rather than merely identifying an error. The baseball coach wants players who are hard-working, determined, and who get along well with their teammates. Parallelism Links This is the parallel structure worksheets section. Parallel structure is the repetition of a chosen grammatical form within a sentence. Parallel structure means using the same pattern of words so two or more ideas have the same level of importance. It brings balance to your writing. It is important to recognize parallel structure and use it in your writing. By making each compared item or idea in your sentence follow the same grammatical pattern, you create a parallel construction. What is Parallelism? When writing a list, every item starts with the same type of verb or noun, adjective, or adverb. Format. Examples:1. "ing" verbs: We went running, biking, swimming, and fishing.2. "ed" verbs: We walked, jumped, and skipped on the way.3. nouns: We drove to the lake, mountains, desert, and beach all in one day.4. adjective: She had purple, silver-tipped, spiky hair.5. adverb: Lovingly, graciously, and generously, she helped us out. cihnon CC0 Public Domain via PixabayWhat is Faulty Parallelism?Faulty parallelism is a sentence is when you writing a list of things and mix up verb forms (to run, jumping, played). Example:Faulty: Samantha likes to run, jumping around in the backyard and played with her friend Jorge yesterday. Correct: Samantha likes running and jumping around in her backyard; in fact, yesterday she played there with her friend Jorge. Another problem is mixing up a list of nouns and verbs (a ball, to jump, running outside). Example:Faulty: Henry likes a ball, to jump and running outside. Correct: Henry likes balls and likes jumping and running outside. Mixed up adjectives or adverb forms can also be a problem:Faulty: Grandpa walked carefully, in a slow way, and halted a lot. Correct: Grandpa walked carefully, slowly, and haltingly. Easy Faulty Parallelism ExercisesRe-write the following sentences so that each has a list using the same verb or noun form. Sample answers are below.The war in Ukraine caused NATO to join together, and they put sanctions on Russia, and everyone stopped buying Russian oil. The English teacher spoke in a nasal tone, unpleasantly, but conveying the information clearly and was funny. The coach told his players that they should get plenty of water, to not eat sugary snacks, and being sure they are getting plenty of sleep. Benefits of coaching include: knowing each player, helping that player to improve and to get to see that person succeed in life. At the party, my sister helped us make the cake, gathering the kids for games, clean up, and to drive some kids home. Exercises that I enjoy doing are marathon running, to swim lengths in a pool, riding my bicycle in the park, and to walk along the trails in a forest. We must either change the laws about drunk driving or it will be necessary to start enforcing them more strictly. The protestors were gathering outside, held signs, starting to shout loudly and stopped the speaker from being heard. My sister-in-law loves fad diets and has tried: eating only meat, to not eat anything but rice, snatching every morning while not restricting anything else, and fasting 12 hours a day. To my horror, my wedding dress looked stained, torn, and it had we hiked! Our latest swim, was swimming, did swim. Fatima is swimming, does swim. Fatima will play, is going to play; will swim, is going to swim. Conditional (may or may not): may play, might play, would play; may swim, could swim, might swim. Harder Faulty Parallelism ExercisesIf you've mastered the easy exercises, try these harder, more complicated sentences:Drunk drivers are thoughtless and take the lives of other people in their own hands, risking their own lives, think about only their own pleasure and fun, and never considering the consequence of their actions. Police enforcement should be responsible for service in the community by safeguarding the property of people who live in the community, in order to protect the innocent from crimes and to ensure that all people have their constitutional rights getting respect. When my husband takes another job in California, I will be staying here in Texas to pack, let the children finish up their school year, fly out to find a house (while my mom comes here to take care of the kids), and begin my new life by driving with all the kids in the car to California while the moving van is taking all of our stuff. In order to convey the information correctly to the crowd, the police officer was speaking loudly, he told people where they should be standing, repeating information so they would remember and gesturing. My roommate and I this afternoon are going to be eating lunch at my downtown favorite, a pizza place, then until our friend Sandy is out of work we will study in the library, meeting up at the dorm with our sorority sisters from Tri-Delta is our next plan, and then all of us will be eating the gourmet popcorn my mom just sent me and we are planning to binge-watch the latest Netflix episodes of our favorite show. Sample Answers for Harder ExercisesDrunk drivers are thoughtlessly taking the lives of other people in their own hands, risking their own lives, thinking only about their own pleasure and fun, and not considering the consequences of their actions. Police enforcement is responsible for serving the community, safeguarding the property of people in that community, protecting the innocent from crimes, and ensuring that all people's constitutional rights are respected. When my husband takes another job in California, I will fly by myself to find a house (while my mom comes here to take care of the kids) and then really attempt to discover what you are trying to say. Let's face it, when we find something hard to read, most of us just give up and move on. Missvvena CC0 Public Domain via PixabaySample Revisions of Difficult SentencesHere are two sample revisions. The first one does a simple list, using "ing" verbs throughout to make sure the list is parallel:Correct Sample Revision: Instead of criticizing the government, people should get involved in voting in every election, registering others to vote, petitioning for causes they believe in, researching about issues, learning the impact of past legislation, going to meetings for candidates, evaluating the character of people running for office, analyzing whether a candidate can present issues forcefully, and working at polling places to make sure the votes are secure and fair.Notice in the above sample that I do not use any conjunctions (and, or, but, so, yet) except in the last item (and working at...). If you do use conjunctions in a list, you need to use semicolons in between the items of the list. In fact, I would strongly encourage you to do that! Long lists like the ones above are tedious to read, and you can make a much more interesting sentence. Here is an example:Correct Sample Revision Using Semicolons: Instead of criticizing the government, people should get involved: making sure they are registered to vote, and registering others; petitioning for causes they believe in; researching about issues to learn the impact of past and current legislation; going to meetings for their party representatives to evaluate the candidate's character as well as how well they can present issues clearly and forcefully; and, finally, working at polling places to make sure the process goes smoothly.The video below gives a good explanation of how to use semicolons in a list.How to Proofread for ParallelismHere are some tips for how to check your own writing for faulty parallelism:Look for long sentences. Those are often the ones that have a lot of ideas that may not be written correctly. Mark those to re-read and check. Look for lists in your sentences. Circle the first words in each list. Are they the same type of verb, noun, or adjective. Read your paper out loud (or ask someone else to read it). If you stumble when reading a sentence, chances are that sentence isn't written as clearly as it could be and may have faulty parallelism. Questions & AnswersQuestion: What is the problem with this sentence, "Police dogs are used for finding lost children, tracking criminals, and the detection of bombs and illegal drugs?"Answer: The items in that list are not in parallel format. Here is a revision: Police dogs are used for finding lost children, tracking criminals and detecting bombs and illegal drugs.Question: What is the problem with this sentence: "The teacher walked through the door and was looking at the students?"Answer: You want to keep the verbs the same. Either of the following will work: The teacher walked through the door and looked at the students. The teacher was walking through the door and looking at the students.Question: Can you help me with this sentence? "The actress worked as a waitress, a researcher as a ranch hand and also went to college to study medicine for a while."Answer: To put a longer phrase like the part about going to college, it often helps to move that phrase to the beginning of the sentence as an introductory clause. When I think about putting that in the beginning, it makes me consider the contrast and actually makes the sentence more interesting: "Although she went to college to study medicine for a while, the actress also learned her profession by working as a waitress, a researcher, and a ranch hand."Question: How can parallelism exercises work with this statement: I like baking and to eat them?Answer: You have a good parallelism exercise here. There are two possible correct ways to write this: 1. I like to bake and eat them. 3. I like baking and eating them. Question: Can you correct this sentence: "We all commit to love that makes you cry and committing that kills you inside?"Answer: This is not really an example of faulty parallelism because it does not have a list. Instead, this sentence needs a causal connection and is not correct as written. Here are some alternatives:Committing to a love that makes you cry can mean committing to something that kills you inside. Can committing to a love that makes you cry mean you are also committing to something that can kill you inside?Question: What is the problem in this sentence: "We go school to learn and getting the knowledge?"Answer: You need to have to "learn" and "getting..." in the same format. You can either use the infinitive form "to" or the gerund "ing" but not both. Here are three correct ways to write this sentence. We go to school to learn and get knowledge. We go to school to learn and for getting knowledge.Question: How can the following sentence be written correctly: "Daniel not only likes swimming but also jogging?"Answer: The sentence above is not incorrect but it sounds a bit awkward. Here is a better way to write it:Not only does Daniel like swimming, but he also enjoys jogging.Daniel likes not only swimming but also jogging.Question: Is this faulty parallelism? And, if so, how should I correct it? "Marie and Pierre Curie had both scientific intuition and logical acumen."Answer: Here is a correction: Marie and Pierre Curie had not only scientific intuition but also logical acumen.Question: The actress worked as waitress, researcher and?Answer: The world need to add an "a" or "the" before waitress. Any other nouns could be used to continue the list. For example:The actress worked as a waitress, researcher, and plumber.Question: Can you help me with this sentence? "My brother wanted a trip around the world and to fly in a supersonic plane."Answer: "My brother wanted both a trip around the world and also a chance to fly in a supersonic plane."Question: Can you help me with this sentence?: "Either the Chinese went to the Philippines for trade or were visited by our ancestors."Answer: This is only part of a sentence, so I will fill in with what I think needs to be included: Why are there so many similarities between the culture and language of the Chinese and that of Filipinos? We assume that either the Chinese traveled by boat to the Philippines to do trading, or Filipinos went to China. Question: What is the correct form of this sentence?: "The teacher cannot tell whether the error is caused by ignorance or careless."Answer: Parallelism is not the problem with this sentence because there is no list of three or more items. However, here are some correct ways to write the sentence: The teacher cannot tell whether the error was caused by ignorance or carelessness. The teacher could not tell whether the error was caused by ignorance or carelessness. The teacher can't tell whether the error was because the student was ignorant or careless. Question: How does this work as an example of parallelism: After Romeo and Juliet ran from home, they started committing to, caring for, and to love each other?Answer: Here is a better version: After Romeo and Juliet ran away from home, they fully committed to caring for and loving each other.Question: What is the correct form of this sentence?: "She is intelligent, ambitious and likes to study."Answer: There are often several correct ways to do a sentence. To get rich and to buy a car is all that Ariarne is interested in.Question: How can I say this correctly: "It is easier to tell the truth than lying to people you love?"Answer: "It is easier to tell the truth or to lie to the people you love?"Which is easier, telling the truth or lying to the people you love?Question: Can you help me with this sentence? During basic training, I was not only told what to do but also what I think?Answer: Here are two correct revisions:During basic training, I was told not only what to do, but also what to think.During basic training, I was not only told what to do, but what also what to think.Question: Can you help me with this sentence? "Request for proposal, an executive summary sometimes, the number of appendices will vary."Answer: In a request for a proposal, there will sometimes be an executive summary required and the number of appendices will vary.Question: Can you help me with this sentence? Competition makes the body run at full speed, feel invigorated, full of life, and fully aware.Question: What is the correct form of this sentence? "The dismissed workers were marching along the main street, chanting slogans, considering their boss and they sang songs."Answer: There are usually a couple of ways to correct parallelism. Often turning each item into an "ing" form is the easiest. You can also make them a noun or a "to" verb form. However, some situations require re-ordering the information and taking one of the items in the list and putting it before the subject. I think that is the case in this sentence because "considering their boss" is not quite clear. What does it mean that "the dismissed workers were considering their boss?" I think what you mean is that they were thinking about their dismissal and the fact that their boss is the problem and that is the cause of them marching, chanting and singing. Here are a couple of ways to do this sentence more clearly: 1. Thinking about the unfairness of their boss, the dismissed workers marched along the main street chanting slogans and singing songs. 2. Remembering their boss, the dismissed workers were marching along the main street, chanting slogans and singing songs. 3. The dismissed workers were marching along the main street, chanting slogans, and singing sarcastic songs about their boss.Question: Why is it important to ensure that spoken text is appropriate to the context?Answer: The most important reason to pay attention to parallelism and other aspects of writing like word usage and length of sentences is that you want your audience to understand you. You also want to persuade them to believe that you are an authority to speak on that subject and are intelligent and educated. Your audience can sometimes understand faulty parallelism, but it often makes the sentence more difficult to read. In fact, you will frequently find you need to re-read a sentence with faulty parallelism to understand what the author is saying. Moreover, writing correctly in parallel structure shows that the writer has excellent English writing skills and can write in a professional and highly proficient way. I often edit the work of University professors who have written many papers. The only consistent error I often discover in the writing of these highly educated people is faulty parallelism. Therefore, if you can master this difficult grammar rule, you will prove your competency. Question: The protestors were gathering outside, held signs, starting to shout loudly, and stopped the speaker from being heard?Answer: The verbs need to be in the same format. Here is an example:The protestors gathered outside, held signs, started to shout loudly and stopped the speaker from being heard.Question: How would you finish the following sentence using a parallel structure: "Celebrating my birthday means sleeping late, eating a good dinner and..."?Answer: Here are three versions, all of which are in parallel structure but use a different form. The first uses the "ing" verb, the second uses a present tense verb form, and the third uses the infinitive "to" form of the verb. Notice that in the 3rd sentence I only include the "to" before the first item in the series, so that I am not too repetitive; however, you could put "to" in front of each item and the sentence would be correct. For me, celebrating my birthday always includes sleeping late, eating a good dinner, having family and friends over to celebrate, and blowing out the candles on my birthday cake. To enjoy my birthday to the utmost, I always sleep late, eat a good dinner, have friends over to celebrate and blow out the candles on my birthday cake with plenty of pomp and ceremony. Celebrating my birthday means I get to sleep late, eat a good dinner, have my friends over, and blow out the candles on my cake.Question: What is the problem with this sentence: "Hannah told her rock-climbing partner that she bought a harness and of her desire to climb Otter Cliffs?"Answer: The main problem in this sentence is the way the order of information is given. In English, we usually put the cause first. So I would re-word the sentence this way:Hannah told her rock climbing partner of her desire to climb Otter Cliffs and that she had bought a harness to do so.After her rock climbing partner saw the harness Hannah had bought, she told him of her desire to climb Otter Cliffs.Question: What is the correct form of this sentence? "Mark Angelo wants to join the band, start a choral group and took more guitar."Answer: There are several ways to write this sentence correctly, but only one you choose depends on whether or not he has already taken the guitar lessons or is planning to do so. Here are some possibilities:After taking guitar lessons, Mark Angelo wants to join a band and start a choral group.Mark Angelo wants to join the band and start a choral group since he has been taking guitar lessons.Question: What is the problem with the sentence "my friend and I went out to eat dinner and a movie"?Answer: The way this sentence is written, it sounds like you and your friend ate both the dinner and the movie. You need a verb to explain what you do at the movies. Here is a rewrite:My friend and I went out to eat dinner and watch a movie.Question: What is the problem with this sentence? "My friends and I went out to eat dinner and a movie."Answer: Your sentence suggests that you "ate" a movie. Here are some re-writes:My friends and I went out to eat dinner and see a movie.My friends and I went out for dinner and a movie.Question: What is the problem with this sentence "The building is 72 feet wide, 120 feet length, and has a height of five stories"?Answer: The words "wide" and "length" are not in the same format. You need to either use " wide/long/high" or "width/length/height." Here are some correct ways to say this information:The building is 72 feet wide, 120 feet long, and five stories high.The building has a width of 72 feet, a length of 120 feet and a height of 5 stories.Question: What is the problem with this sentence, "Not only is swimming good exercise, but it is also fun"?Answer: The sentence is too wordy for such a short statement. There are a couple of ways to write it correctly:Not only is swimming good exercise, it is also fun.Swimming is not only good exercise, it is also fun.Question: What is the problem with this sentence? The city corporation explained when the cleanup would begin and it would be funded by a referendum...explained when the cleanup would begin and described how it would be funded by a referendum.Question: What is the problem with this sentence? "Tired but elated, Clark spoke to reporters."Answer: Tired, but elated, Clark spoke to reporters and said, "Here is what I think about this situation."Question: What is the problem with this sentence: "She loves to work in the kitchen baking, she makes bread, cooks, and experimental recipes."Answer: The list is not parallel in structure. Here is a rewrite: She loves to work in the kitchen baking, making bread, and cooking experimental recipes.Question: What is the problem with this sentence: "We enjoyed walking around, biking in the lawn and to eat our favorite food under a tree"?Answer: You are using two different forms "ing" and "to" in the list (additionally "on" is the correct preposition for hiking, not "in"). You need to use just one form to keep it parallel. Here are some options:We enjoyed walking around, biking on the lawn, and eating our favorite foods.We liked to walk around, bike on the lawn, and eat our favorite food.Question: Is this grammar correct? Frank and Eleanor had both talent and compassion.Answer: Your sentence is correct, but one of the following would be better:Both Frank and Eleanor had talent and compassion.Frank and Eleanor had both talent and compassion.Question: What is the problem with this sentence? "Examples of aerobic exercises are distance, running, cycling and long walks."Answer: You have problems with the commas and verbs. Here is a correction:Examples of aerobic exercise are long-distance running, cycling, and taking long walks.Question: What is the problem with this sentence? "The candidates' goals include winning the election, a national health program and the educational system."Answer: The problem is the verb "winning" does not fit all three parts of the list. To correct this, you would need to either find a verb that did work for all three aspects or add a correct verb for each item. Here is an example:The candidates' goals include winning the election, creating a national health program, and improving the educational system.Along with winning the election, the candidates' goals include improving the national health program and the educational system.Question: What is the problem with this sentence, "He both wanted to keep his job and to move to the city"? Answer: Your sentence would be better if the "both" is moved next to the verb, and you eliminate the second "to" because "to both" will then refer to both items: "He wanted to both keep his job and move to the city."Question: Can you help me with this sentence? "There are more graduates in Miami than there are graduates in the regions."Answer: "More students graduate in Miami than in the regions." However, I'm not sure what you mean by "regions," and that makes the sentence sound awkward. Do you mean rural areas outside of Miami? That would make a better sentence: More students graduate high school in Miami than graduate from rural schools in that region.Virginia Kearney (author) from United States on July 10, 2020:Aiman, your sentences have parallelism errors and also do not connect the causes with clear transition words. I love your "me-ism" example, and you may be right! Perhaps "selfies" are invading our speech! However, poor spoken grammar is not completely new to this generation. Your sentence, "My cousin and I" is the correct form in both writing and speaking and if my child or my students used the pronouns incorrectly, I would (later, in a private conversation) be sure they understood the correct standard English format for that type of phrase. However, English is a dynamic and changing language and sometimes new phrases that do not sound correct at first can become standard when they are used widely. For example, I was really annoyed when my students started writing, "I was annoyed when I called and she didn't pick up." I told them "pick up the phone" was the correct phrasing. However, "pick up" has now become idiomatic for "answering." Of course, it is based on the fact that we used to actually "pick up" the phone receiver in order to answer it.John Dove on October 21, 2017:Hi Virginia--You sound like you love the English language and also love to teach. Your students are lucky.What about changes in form or style -- like, I was taught many years ago to say "My cousin and I" went for a walk. But today, loads of young people say "Me and my cousin went for a walk." Which is proper? Does the latter imply that society is drifting toward "me-ism"?Mirran Khan. All i wood have to do is to go through the same process again, to click on the colour and making sure i had selected the same shade of red colour..... plzz send answees on my email malikzohaibqbal786@gmail.comVirginia Kearney (author) from United States on May 21, 2017:Thanks Vicky for the suggestion of giving more instruction about nouns, adverbs, gerunds and other parts of speech. I have done that in other articles that are connected to this one but I think you are right that adding some information would help here. I will do that!Harish Mangain from New Delhi , India on May 21, 2017:A very useful article for guys like me who like reading and writing English. Thank you very much , Virginia.Vicky Suarez on May 21, 2017:The guide on parallelism is comprehensive. Can you provide a more vivid example of what is noun, adverb. Or gerund in a sentence. A mistake is often occurred in part of speech or in sentences.Most often I do not know where the noun pronoun etc is. A technical writing must be seen clearly especially the different parts of speech must be identifiable.Virginia Kearney (author) from United States on May 20, 2017:Thanks Ron! I make my students read these, at any rate!Ronald E Franklin from Mechanicsburg, PA on May 20, 2017:Very helpful. I thought your examples were really great. I think articles like this should be required reading for new writers.Virginia Kearney (author) from United States on May 20, 2017:Thanks Heidi! I have found that this is an error which tends to crop up when people start trying to write more interesting and complicated thoughts and sentences. Therefore, it is often advanced writers who most need help in learning how to do this correctly.Heidi Thorne from Chicago Area on May 20, 2017:So easy to make these errors! Great review of the problem. Sharing on Twitter, Facebook, and LinkedIn!
